

This Old Column

Indianapolis Historic Preservation Commission

August 2005

IHPC receives website upgrade!

The IHPC website has received an upgrade that will provide greater access to neighborhood preservation plans and easier navigation for users. The newly formatted website is part of the recently launched Indianapolis Department of Metropolitan Development (please visit www.indygov.org/dmd).

While, most of the content remains the same, the IHPC website is redesigned to be more user friendly. New additions include drop-down menus and a Frequently Asked Questions (FAQ) option available to visitors for the first time. The new website also contains scanned copies of each neighborhood preservation plan that can be printed or viewed online. Now, applicants have the option of reviewing recommended and non-recommended preservation practices for each of their respective districts without having to purchase a copy and or make a visit to the City-County Building.

In addition, the website contains the latest staff reports, which are posted the Friday before commission hearings. Results from both administrative and commission hearings are also updated regularly. If web access is a problem, feel free to contact IHPC at 327-4406 or visit the IHPC office for more information regarding your concerns.